Homework Log Changes

October, 2007
Issue 2

We made it to newsletter 2! I made some changes on the weekly homework log. I would like more parent feedback on homework assignments. Please let me know if your child is completing tasks on their own or is requiring help. This provides me with valuable information on whether or not I need to re-teach or move on. Unless I write in "they may need support" it should be an independent review of what we did in class. The log has a space for you to sign. I also moved the expressive icons to the bottom near your signature. I had noticed that students were circling them. Please circle so your child knows how you felt about their homework performance

- Bring to school:

Class Rules

The WSD elementary students have learned our three easy rules, which we call the

"Three Rs":

- Respect Yourself
- Respect Others
- Respect Stuff

Students are still having some difficulty with respecting stuff. Many students are leaving their notebooks, homework folders, coats and miscellaneous other stuff out. All items are being sent to the lost and found. If you notice your child leaving in the morning with a coat or sweater and not returning home with it, please send them to the front office to retrieve it. We are working very hard on independence and responsibility. Next year as 5th graders they will be joining the middle school and these skills will be a necessity.

Writer of the Week:

The first writer of the week was Noah Tufton! He wrote a story about camping and meeting some not so nice Monsters! Please be sure to congratulate him.

Homework

Reading Homework

Students will start bringing home one of two things for homework in reading. A personal book that they have written or worked on in class or an accelerated reader Library book. They will bring this home once a week to read and will be tested the next day. We ask that you read with your child and make sure your son or daughter understands the story. There will be a signature page that needs to be signed by you that they completed the reading. Thanks in advance for your help.
